Chapter 1 by Phillip S.

Intro

One night, every century in the secret town of Midgard, there is a fog so thick you can hardly see a wall right in front of your face. One year this silent town will be discovered at the worst time and release a secret into mankind that doesn't suspect a thing. What you don't know is that the people of Midgard protect mankind from a ... Whoa I almost said the best part, man that was close. You want to know the secret, then read this book, if you dare.

"Slenderman" Sarah said, crunching her soda can against her head with cocky surety and tossing it aside before reaching for another.

"It's not Slenderman!" Brian snapped, slamming the book shut and yanking the cooler away from Sarah before she emptied it. "Do you want to hear the story or not?"

Sarah snorted "Oh I want to hear it, Alls I'm saying is I know how it ends. It's Slenderman." She shrugged, leaning over to steal Claire's soda from her hand.

"Well, whatever it is, I don't think I want to hear about it. Your stories are always so gruesome, Brian." Claire said letting the soda go. "I'm going to bed." She got up and went to her sleeping bag

"Fine Whatever" Brian said getting up and tucking the book under his arm "Since you're sooooo

Following the tradition of the first two and only two other books in the series, the first chapter of Brian's pubescent voice crack sarcastically. "He's just mad because no one believes in his stupid" She grabbed a cola can, then suddenly something grabbed onto her wrist. Looking up, she was face to face with two huge glowing red eyes. "...monsters"
